Royal Meeting

HRH The Princess Royal attended Truro Cathedral yesterday in her role as Patron of Restorative Justice.

Redruth School students, Ellie Richards and Dan Staples were invited to give a short speech on the value of Restorative Justice; resolving conflict through focusing on the needs of the victims, offenders and the community.

Students were delighted to be given such an opportunity and enjoyed the experience thoroughly. Ellie said, "Princess Anne asked me about my involvement with the restorative justice approach. She was really interested and so lovely." Dan added, "I was quite nervous but managed to do my speech and I enjoyed it."

The Princess Royal presented Redruth School students with an award for Introducing Restorative Practice. All the students involved were thrilled to be part of such a prestigious event.

Young Writers

Once again Redruth School students have been successful in a national competition. In the 26th year of the Young Writers' Annual Poetry competition, out of 13,000 entrants, 38 Redruth School students have been successful with the poems they have written and will become published authors. Sarah Washer the editor of the competition wrote, " I'd like to congratulate Redruth School. I am sure your students will keep up the great writing." The book will be published in February.

Headteacher's Christmas Breakfast

A group of students were invited to join the Headteacher for a festive breakfast at the end of last term. The students were individually nominated by teachers for displaying behaviour and conduct that goes above and beyond. Congratulations to them all!

Apprenticeship Opportunity

Congratulations to Jude Boyd who was offered an apprenticeship with Plymouth Argyle. However, he has turned down the opportunity to focus on his academic studies.

Seasonal Hampers

Well done to Year 7 and 6th Form students who worked together to create 12 decorated Christmas hampers at the end of last term.

The charity, Cornish Christmas Box was set up last year and supplied 250 of Cornwall's vulnerable and deprived families with food and drink. This year they believe over 400 boxes will supply families across Cornwall, feeding 4000 to 6000 people.

Pictured below is Hannah Datson (with students and staff) who is giving up her time to support the charity and deliver the hampers. She presented the school with a certificate to recognise the efforts of our students.

CPR Foodbank

Students were invited to donate to the Camborne Pool Redruth Foodbank and responded with donations of cereal, rice, pasta, tinned goods, biscuits, cakes, pudding, tea, coffee and soft drinks. Two students, Perry Li and Ben Meehan made exceptional contributions.

Mr Martin, Headteacher, said, "The students have been incredibly supportive of this appeal and have once again demonstrated their commitment to their community. It is reassuring that students have a desire to help others and show their compassion and kindness in action."
